

SERVED AS JUROR BETWEEN DATES OF HIS ARRESTS

Herbert Franko, Accused of Forging Name to Check, Astonishes Police.

PHOTO WAS IN GALLERY

Freed on Larceny Charge, Summoned to Serve in Judge Crane's Court.

Herbert Franko, Jeweller, amazed detectives at Police Headquarters today by the calm announcement that between the time he was arrested on a charge of grand larceny and his second arrest, last night, he had served as a juror in Judge Crane's court. Part V. of the Court of General Sessions. For the second time Franko's picture goes into the Rogues Gallery.

Franko, who is thirty-three years old, and whose present address is No. 150 East Ninety-first street, was arrested by Detectives McGowan and Buckman, of the Central Office, on the complaint of John Baser, of No. 42 East Thirtieth street. Baser charges that Franko signed his (Baser's) name to a check for $50 last December and got the cash for it at the Twelfth Ward Bank. When Franko was "lined up" before the detectives at Headquarters today he denied he had been arrested before. Then Detective Stringer recalled him. "Why, he's the man arrested on Oct. 2, 1908, on the complaint of William B. Porter, who charged him with grand larceny," said Stringer. "He then lived at No. 127 East One Hundred and Fourth street. Porter claimed he had swindled him out of $13 worth of jewelry, which he took at No. 23 John street, after giving a memorandum. He was charged with pawning the jewelry and converting the money to his own use. Magistrate Droege discharged him when he was arraigned, and he applied to the courts to have his likeness removed from the Rogues Gallery. He succeeded. I was on that case and I'm sure he is the same man."

Then another detective identified him and Franko admitted to Inspector McCafferty that he was the Franko arrested before.

"I have been serving on a jury since my discharge," he announced. "Did you convict anybody?" asked McCafferty. "Well, the evidence was there," he answered non-committally. He did not tell on what cases he had served. He was arraigned later in the West Side Court.

GRIEF FOR DEAD WIFE CAUSES DEATH BY GAS

"Tired of Life Without My Mate," Leonard Wallace's Farewell Message.

Leonard J. Wallace, a salesman of the Pittsburgh Water Heater Company, which has offices at No. 26 Fourth avenue, in this city, killed himself with gas in a room in the rear of the company's offices today. Wallace's wife died just before Christmas from injuries sustained in a fall. Wallace closed his home in the Bronx after her death and took to living in furnished rooms when he was in the city, though he spent most of the time travelling for his firm.

B. W. Dole, who worked for the heater company here with Wallace, said today that Wallace frequently said that life was not worth living since his wife died. He talked in that strain all day yesterday, and Dole could not cheer him up, though when he walked out of the office last night he told Dole not to worry about him.

Nobody knows when he went back to the office, but he was found by a porter this morning, dead. He had closed the door and turned on the gas. Wallace was found without lighting it. Then he sat on a chair with his head against the wall until death came. A note was found beside him. It read: "Friend Dole: Tired of life without my mate. Notify mother. WALLACE."

So far as Dole knows, all of Wallace's business affairs were in good order and nothing except his loneliness brought about his despondency.

ARM CAUGHT IN MACHINERY.

James Leon, Severely Injured, Removed to Hospital.

James Leon, a baker, of No. 8 Downing street, was caught by the right hand in a mixing machine at the bakery of the Knickerbocker Block Company, of No. 25 East Fifteenth street, early today. Before he could free himself, part of his forearm was drawn between two heavy rollers. Leon's fellow workmen shut off the power. As his hand was extricated he fell to the floor unconscious. Dr. Lange, who was summoned, removed the injured man to Bellevue Hospital.
